

YAHOO! MAIL

Subject Assuming you received my message.
From Bo Dincer <bdincer66@icloud.com>
To: james.gorman@morganstanley.com <james.gorman@morganstanley.com>
Cc: Bo Dincer <bd2561@columbia.edu>
Date Mon, Sep 6, 2021 at 2:54 AM

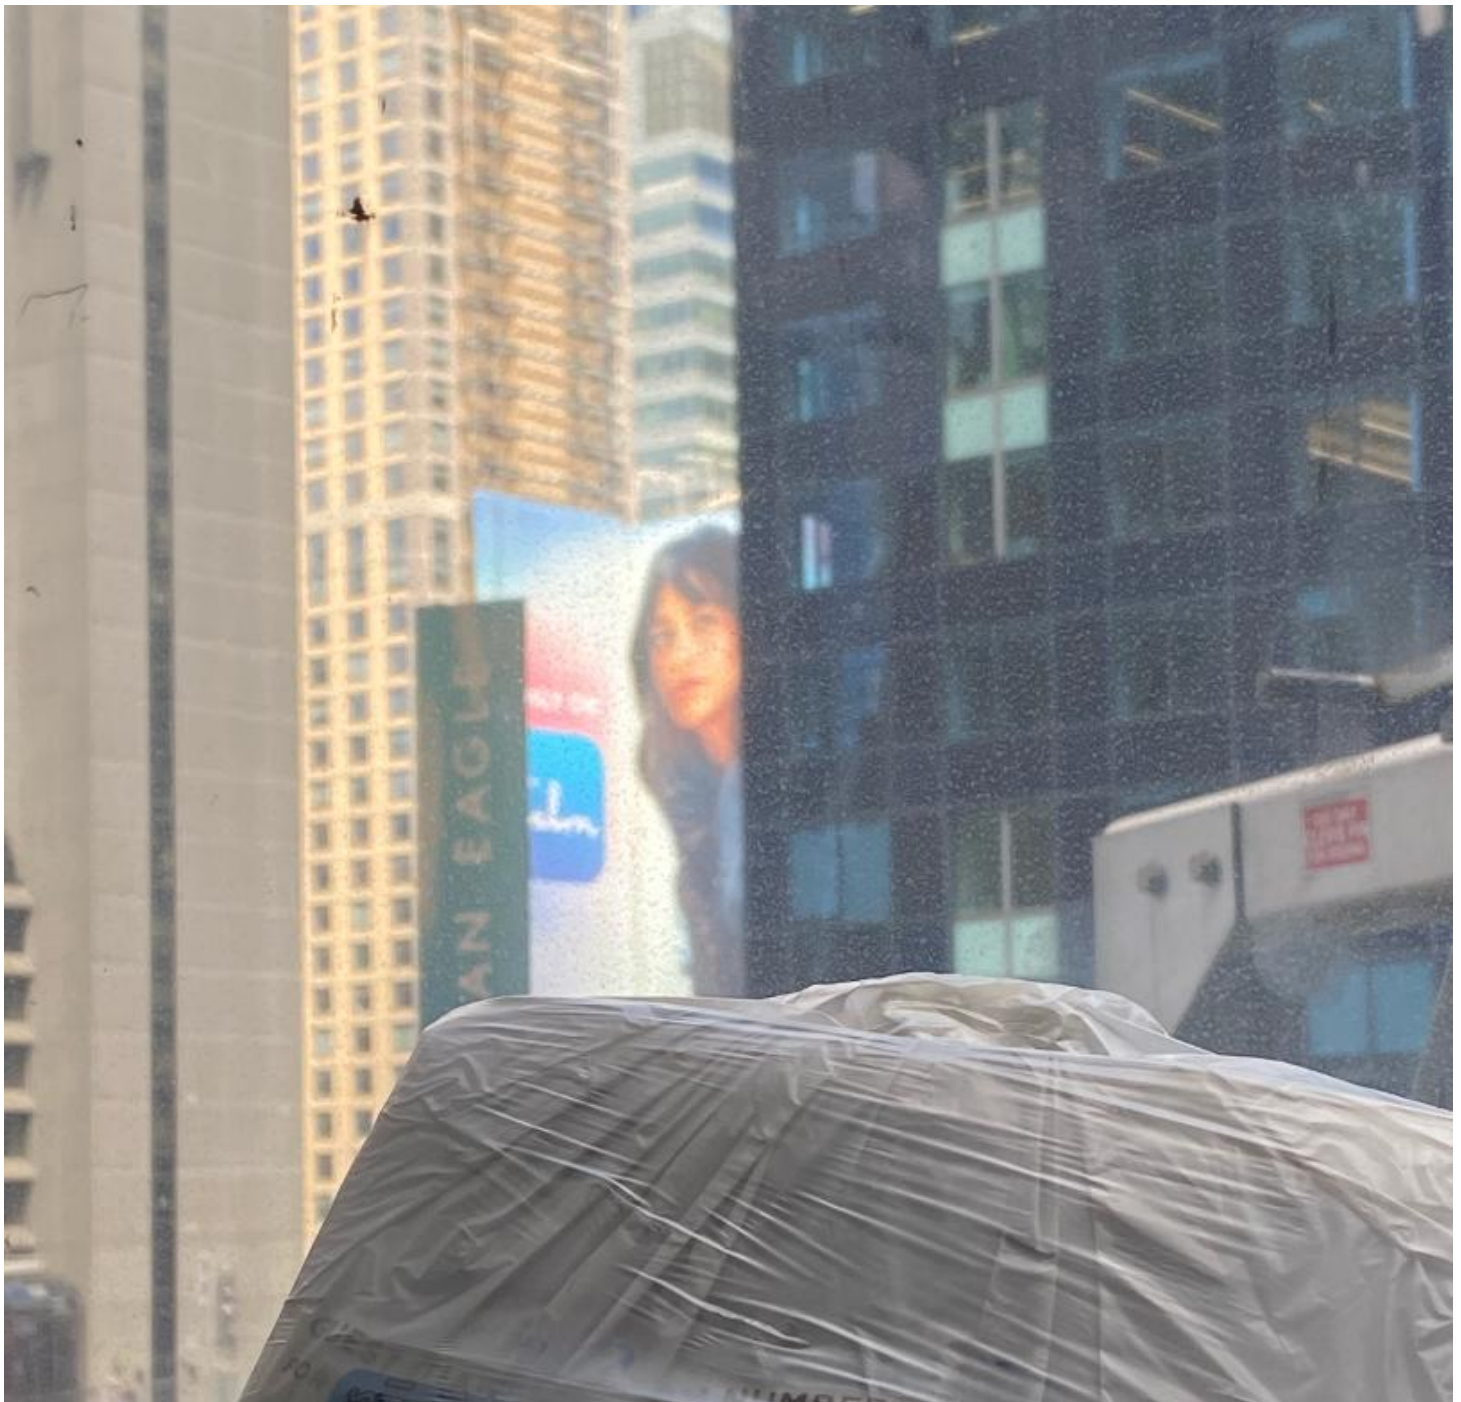

<https://www.emporis.com/buildings/115515/750-seventh-avenue-new-york-city-ny-usa>

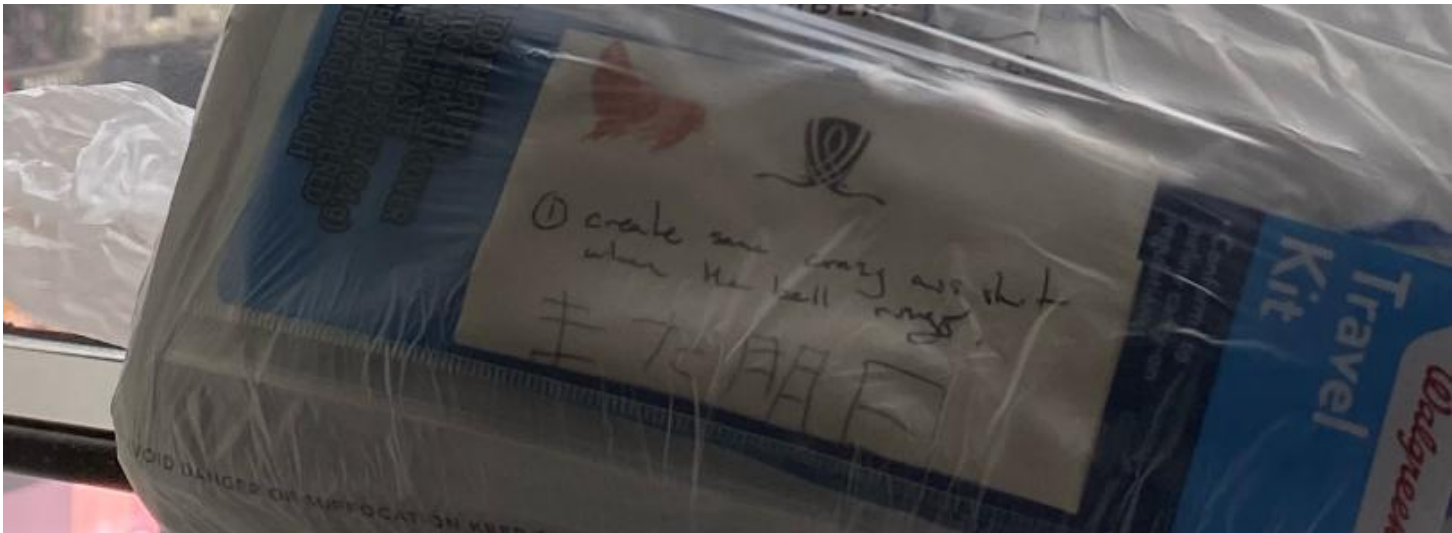

I left it at the front desk, and I forgive but I can't let that Rodney King behavior go on... so I had to let some people know how you like to maintain a Sherman of a different variety on the fixed income trading revenues at MS. If you'd like, I'm happy to talk about those later as well.

I put my fingerprint on the letter to make sure you know it came from me. I even wrapped that up in case you want keep it in a glass case, vault, or whatever.

Yours truly,

#bbo

Begin forwarded message:

From: 6462563609@mms.att.net
Date: September 6, 2021 at 2:46:40 AM EDT
To: bdincer66@icloud.com

2:42

LTE

emporis.com — Private

Structure in General

Building type skyscraper

Building status

existing [completed]

Facade system

curtain wall

Architectural style

postmodernism

Usages

Main Usage

commercial office

Facts

- A 35-story 600,000 sq. ft. office tower in midtown New York, this building was originally designed to meet the needs of various undefined tenants.
- Shortly after its completion the building was acquired by Morgan Stanley Dean Witter.
- The setbacks required by the New York City Building Code made the spiraling shape of the building.
- The owner's requirement for a column free space necessitated 84 exterior column transfers.
- During severe winds the top floors of the building sway considerably, so much so that some employees get motion sickness.

We use cookies on our website to allow you the best possible service. More information can be found here.

OK